Mobilesoft Data Management (MDB) Data Recovery.Following news the United States is preparing to break with the International Monetary Fund (IMF), new IMF data has indicated a dramatic growth in the number of members leaving the international body. In its latest Membership Statistics 2012 report, the IMF notes a sharp increase in the number of withdrawals from the global body from $12.9bn in 2011 to $15.7bn in 2012. Without even considering the recent crisis in the Eurozone or the Ukraine, this year has seen a growth of around 5% in the number of members withdrawal, equivalent to three withdrawals per day. The surge in withdrawals comes despite the fact that many of these countries remain in debt to the IMF. The data also indicates a drastic growth in the number of payments by members to the fund. While withdrawals are not linked to the size of payments, in 2012, the number of withdrawals relative to total IMF payments jumped by 73% on 2011. The increased economic output, exports and trade of developing countries will make them attractive to investors. This can cause a strong argument to leave, since the IMF is not a development-orientated institution, but an economy-orientated institution. The number of withdrawals will continue to rise for at least the next three years, potentially leading to a decrease in the size of the IMF and major revisions of the International monetary policy. Bioenergetic analysis of respiratory chains of E. coli during progressive cell growth. The bioenergetic analysis of the respiratory pathway was done in E. coli cells during the period of carbon starvation and growth. The degree of the aerobic growth of the bacteria was described by the oxygen consumption and by the growth yield per milligram of dry cells. It was shown that the data obtained for growth yield are in good agreement with the data on respiration. In anaerobic cells the biomass yield was significantly lower than in aerobic cells. In fast-growing aerobic cells (0.99-0.99.10(-9) cells per mol O<sub>2</sub>) the amount of cytochrome c oxidase and the protein content corresponded with the predicted values. In slow-growing aerobic cells the amount of c6a93da74d
